Biographical information

Angelo (1886-1966), John (Jack) (1889-1977) and Joseph Cortese (1890-1969) grew up in London, Ontario, Canada, although Angelo was born in Italy and moved to Canada when he was 18 months old. Angelo played the harp, John the flute, and Joseph the violin. The brothers had successful individual careers as well as collectively as the Cortese Trio. Angelo visited Memphis, Tennessee, in 1911 and was sufficiently pleased with his reception that he moved to the city. Joseph followed in 1913 and John in 1926. In Memphis, they gave concerts, taught, and played at funerals conducted by J.T. Hinton & Son. As early as 1914, the Cortese brothers became impresarios, bringing soprano Nellie Melba and violinist Jan Kubilek to Memphis. Over the following decades, the brothers brought many opera and theatrical companies, as well as individual musicians, singers and dancers to Memphis, usually as part of tours of the South and Canada. Later, Angelo went into the real estate and insurance business while Joe and Jack opened a dry cleaning business.
