MEMOIR.

WADE H. BOLTON.

WADE HAMPTON BOLTON, to whose beneficence we are indebted for the institution which bears his name, was born in Christian County, Kentucky, December 8, 1812. While young he removed to Shelby County, Tennessee, where he was married to Miss Lavinia Ann, daughter of John B. and Amy H. Person, December 21, 1836.

Mr. Bolton began life as a farmer, with only sagacity and pluck for his capital. Prospering in the farming business, he afterward became a merchant, and for several years before the civil war was engaged in buying and selling negroes. As a business man he was eminently successful, and it was commonly said that everything he touched turned as if by magic into gold. By unceasing industry and energy, and by practicing economy, he amassed a handsome fortune, and died in Memphis, Tenn., July 23, 1869, leaving no children.

Mr. Bolton often deplored the fact that in his youth he had been deprived of the advantages of a collegiate education, and, in order that those who came after him might be able to obtain that, the need of which he himself so much felt, he resolved to bequeath a large portion of his property for the founding of an institution to be called Bolton College, and tuition in which should forever be free to every poor white child in the First Civil District of his county. Accordingly, on examination of his will after his death, it was found that, after amply providing for Mrs. Bolton, and bequeathing small amounts to relatives and faithful servants, and ten thousand dollars to the widow of Stonewall Jackson, the residue was given to build and endow a college, "to be a perpetuity for the education of the poor white children of the First District," and said college to be situated on the Hoboken farm. The will provided that the College be built after the death of his wife; but she, desiring to see the will of her husband accomplished during her lifetime, and in order that the institution might sooner begin its career of usefulness, waived her lifetime interest in the Hoboken farm and insisted that the College be built, and has done all in her power to make it a success. The College has begun and will continue, and the name of Wade H. Bolton will live forever, to be blessed by the cultured men and women who have been raised by his munificent gift to higher planes of usefulness, and eternity alone can tell the good resulting therefrom.

August 13, 1889.

BOLTON COLLEGE.

ENDOWMENT.

Bolton College was founded by Mr. Wade H. Bolton, of Shelby County, Tennessee, whose name it bears. The design of the founder was to place within the reach of every child in the First Civil District of Shelby County, a collegiate education.

LOCATION.

The College is located 4½ miles north of Brunswick, Tenn., on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, and 7½ miles southeast of Tipton, on the Newport News and Mississippi Valley Railroad.

Pupils who notify the President, will be met at either depot and transported to the College free of charge.

THE POLICY.

The policy of the College will be determined by the Board of Trustees, who, as a body, represent the people of the First Civil District of Shelby County, for whose benefit it was founded, and no particular party or sect. It is the aim of the College to educate for citizenship.

GOVERNMENT.

Students will be held responsible for good order and the diligent use of their time. A failure to conform to these simple requirements will result in the dismissal of the offender.

Those who do not intend to give their whole time and attention to the work prescribed, would do well not to enter.

The loss of one recitation injures, not only the particular student, but all who are associated with him. Therefore, students will be required to be in attendance upon all class exercises.

BOARDING.

The Department of Boarding is under the direction of an experienced matron, Mrs. H. M. Thomas. Young ladies occupying rooms in the College boarding house, are expected cheerfully to conform to the regulations requisite for a quiet and orderly household.
Students who board in the community will be subject to the same regulations that are in force on the campus. Parties who keep boarders for Bolton College will be required to enforce the regulations prescribed for boarders at the College Home.

Where boarding connections of pupils prove unsatisfactory, they will be placed elsewhere.

Board can be had in the "College Home" at $10 (ten) per month.

SPECIAL BOARDERS.

Those who come to the "Home" on Monday morning and leave on Friday afternoon will be charged $8 (eight) per month.
