Biographical information

Jefferson Finis Davis (1808-1889) was a soldier, U.S. representative and senator from Mississippi, U.S. Secretary of War, 1853-1857, and President of the Confederate States of America, 1861-1865. The collection concerns primarily the years 1877 to 1889 when Davis moved to the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Those years were difficult for Davis who was plagued with financial problems, legal battles, and public censure. One such incident concerned the estate of his brother Joseph Emory Davis, who died in 1870. In Joseph's will there was no mention of Jefferson's ownership of Brierfield Plantation near Vicksburg, Mississippi, although Joseph had given it to him, without a written deed, in 1835. Jefferson made no attempt to establish his legal claim to Brierfield until 1873 when he was in need of money. He then took Joseph's grandchildren to court and finally was awarded the land in 1877 by a decision of the Mississippi Supreme Court. Davis continued to reside in Memphis, Tennessee, and employed his son-in-law, Joel Addison Hayes, Jr. (1848-1919), to manage the property.

Hayes, the son of Joel Addison and Lucy White Hayes, married Margaret Howell Davis (1855-1909) in 1876 in Memphis where he worked as a cashier for the State National Bank, a predecessor of the First National Bank which later held the collection. The couple had five children, four of whom survived to adulthood. Managing Brierfield from afar proved to be a constant worry for Hayes and Davis. There were problems with land and building improvements, the dishonesty of local surveyors, a succession of corrupt and incompetent overseers, and repeated flooding of the Mississippi River, which required frequent visits to the property by both men.

In 1877, Davis was saved from financial distress by Mrs. Sarah Anne Ellis Dorsey, a wealthy widow who owned a large house called "Beauvoir" near Biloxi, Mississippi. She offered Davis the use of a cottage on her property for a modest fee. An ardent admirer of Davis, Mrs. Dorsey served as his amanuensis while he wrote much of his The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government (1881). In 1878, Mrs. Dorsey moved to New Orleans and accepted a down payment from Davis on the purchase of "Beauvoir". After her death from cancer in July 1879, Davis, who acted as her executor, was the principal heir to her estate.

In 1884 Hayes developed lung trouble and moved his family to Colorado Springs, Colorado. Davis was left to supervise Brierfield from the Gulf Coast and it was during a visit to the property in November 1889 that he caught a cold which developed into bronchitis. Davis died in New Orleans on December 6. Hayes worked for the First National Bank in Colorado Springs and became president. Hayes died in Los Angeles on January 26, 1919.

Scope and contents

The collection mainly documents the business affairs of Jefferson Davis as handled by his son-in-law Joel Addison Hayes, Jr. It also contains papers relating to Hayes' own business and financial dealings in Memphis and Nashville, and includes correspondence from the following individuals: Varina Howell Davis, Margaret Davis Hayes, Joel Addison Hayes, Sr., Ade Hayes Garrett, Sade Hayes, William O. Hayes, and J.D. Howell. The material is arranged in two series: Personal papers and Business papers.

Series 1, Personal papers: the letters from Davis to Hayes primarily concern the difficulties of managing Davis' Brierfield Plantation and other financial matters, such as investments and loans, which Hayes managed for Davis. Many of these letters include long postscripts to Addison and Margaret Hayes written by Varina Davis. Correspondence from Varina to her daughter includes three letters written about the death of Sarah Anne Dorsey and her bequest of Beauvoir to Jefferson Davis. The series also includes numerous letters from Margaret Hayes to her husband describing the domestic life of the Davis household on the Gulf Coast and the activities of the Hayes children on vacations in Blue Ridge Springs, Virginia, and Monteagle, Tennessee. Correspondence to Hayes from his father, brother, and sisters contains family news and information about the Hayes family investments and landholdings near Nashville.

Series 2, Business papers: these papers consist of correspondence, receipts, notes, and cancelled checks which document stock and mining investments, land sales and management, and foreign banking of Jefferson Davis and Addison Hayes. There is also a folder on the funeral costs of two family members.

An inventory of the collection prepared in 1978 is included as an appendix to the finding aid.

Provenance

The collection was held by the First National Bank of Memphis (later First Tennessee Bank) which contacted Memphis State University's Special Collections Department in 1967 in regard to its preservation. The Hayes strongbox contained thirty-five letters written by Jefferson Davis as well as miscellaneous personal and business papers of the Davis and Hayes families. The University offered to house the collection and in 1978 it was moved to Special Collections for inspection and inventorying. In 1980 the Davis Family Association obtained the collection from the bank and donated it to the University in August of that year.

Processing information

A grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities enabled the collection to be processed, and also to be microfilmed along with nine Davis letters from the Meriwether family papers (MSS.120). Much of the correspondence has been encapsulated. In 1981, a copy of the microfilm was supplied to Rice University, Houston, Texas, publisher of The Papers of Jefferson Davis. The strongbox which contained the collection was apparently donated to Rice University.
