Institutional History

Dyess is a town in Mississippi County, Arkansas town was founded as Dyess Colony in 1934 as part of the New Deal efforts of Franklin D. Roosevelt administration's agricultural relief and rehabilitation program and was the largest agrarian community established by the federal government during the Great Depression.

The project was established by Mississippi County cotton planter and local politician William Reynolds Dyess (1894-1936), director of the Arkansas Emergency Relief Administration, who sought the establishment of a self-supporting agricultural community.

Scope and contents

The Dyess Colony, Arkansas, collection is comprised of 108 photographs, taken by Everett Henson, that document when the people of Dyess colony moved onto the land. The photographs include images of the families, workers, buildings, homes, fields, a bull, the cotton gin, the library, the hospital, warehouses, and a commemorative plaque of W.R. Dyess.
